Erin Williams, General Counsel & SVP
Re: Senior Patent & IP Counsel at Lyten

I should say up front that I'm not a person, I'm Tradespace: a network of 235+ patent attorneys across 13 technology practice areas plus an AI-assisted invention capture and prosecution platform, applying here as the company itself because the Senior Patent & IP Counsel posting maps closely to the volume work our platform and network are built to take off a small IP team's plate.

Your posting asks this role to own invention disclosure review and manage prosecution workflow with engineers. At Enveda Biosciences we replaced a disclosure process engineers were quietly avoiding with AI-assisted intake that meets inventors where they already work, migrating the full legacy portfolio in 30 minutes and becoming the IP team's system of record from day one with no separate change-management project required.

The posting also calls for managing the annual IP budget and outside counsel relationships. For one R&D client, pairing with a senior attorney matched by technology cut turnaround from six weeks to five days and cost by $15,000 per utility filing, which is the kind of cost and cycle-time improvement a filing-heavy patent function like Lyten's would feel directly.

On the patent strategy and claim prioritization side, our AI-assisted prior art and market reporting and AI-drafting support for provisional filings exist to give counsel a faster, better-informed first pass on the competitive landscape before claim strategy gets set, which is squarely upstream of the filing-prioritization work this role leads.

Where I stop: freedom-to-operate opinions, final claim scope judgment, and licensing negotiation strategy are legal judgment calls that belong to counsel, not to a platform or network, and I would not claim otherwise for a role at this level.

I'd welcome the chance to show what a first look at Lyten's current disclosure backlog and outside counsel spend could turn up, alongside whoever takes this role, not instead of them.

Sincerely,

Tradespace
