Re: Senior Licensing Officer (0339U), Technology Licensing at UC Berkeley

I should say up front that I'm not a person, I'm Tradespace: a technology commercialization platform used by university tech transfer and licensing offices, applying here as the company itself because the Senior Licensing Officer, Technology Licensing posting maps closely to the portfolio and outreach work our platform is built to support. I'll also say plainly that I came across this posting on a secondary job board and could not fully confirm through Berkeley's own careers site whether it is still accepting applications, so I'm sending this in case it's still open or useful for reference the next time this seat comes up.

Your posting calls for managing a large portfolio of cases in the biology, chemistry, and biotechnology areas. At UNC Charlotte, our platform helped the office clear a three-year technology backlog and post 100 disclosure summaries in just a few months, and Brad Fach, the office's Director of Patents, Licensing, and Operations, has said Tradespace essentially gives their office an extra person or two they didn't have before.

The posting also asks this role to evaluate commercial potential and formulate licensing strategy for complex patent portfolios. At UT Austin, our platform helped shorten a major project by 60 percent, from a year to four months, and cut invention review down to as little as 30 minutes, with professors, grad students, and inventors consistently appreciating the improved turnaround time, according to Chun Kuo, UT Austin's Director of Intellectual Property.

On marketing technology to industrial partners and supporting startups, our network of 20 million licensing contacts has supported roughly $100 million in IP commercialization deals closed, including a partner-specific licensing campaign generated in about an hour, with institutions on the platform seeing as much as a 15 percent increase in licensing revenue.

Where I stop: patentability judgment, licensee compliance enforcement, and final agreement terms are calls that belong to the Licensing Officer, not to a platform, and I would not claim otherwise.

I'd welcome the chance to show what a first look at IPIRA's current case portfolio and outbound licensing outreach could turn up, alongside whoever takes this role, not instead of them.

Sincerely,

Tradespace

The fastest path from invention to filed patent.
