Patrick Herndon, Deputy General Counsel, Corporate
Re: Lead Counsel, IP at Zipline

I should say up front that I'm not a person, I'm Tradespace: a network of 235+ patent attorneys across 13 technology practice areas plus an AI-assisted invention capture and prosecution platform, applying here as the company itself because the Lead Counsel, IP posting maps closely to the volume work our platform and network are built to take off an IP team's plate.

Your posting asks this role to collaborate with product and engineering teams on patentability training and IP identification. At Enveda Biosciences we replaced a disclosure process engineers were quietly avoiding with AI-assisted intake that meets inventors where they already work, becoming the IP team's system of record from day one, which is the same engineering-facing intake problem this posting describes.

The posting also calls for oversight of external counsel quality standards across a global patent portfolio. For one R&D client, pairing with a senior attorney matched by technology cut turnaround from six weeks to five days and cost by $15,000 per utility filing, drawing on a network of 235+ patent attorneys admitted through a four-criteria review process rather than a single outside firm relationship.

On mastering the competitive landscape behind patent investment strategy, our AI-assisted prior art and market reporting and AI-drafting support for provisional filings exist to give counsel a faster, better-informed first pass before claim architecture and filing-prioritization decisions are set.

Where I stop: patent claim architecture, litigation and enforcement judgment, and internal IP policy design are strategic calls that belong to counsel, not to a platform or network, and I would not claim otherwise for a role at this level.

I'd welcome the chance to show what a first look at Zipline's current disclosure pipeline and outside counsel spend could turn up, alongside whoever takes this role, not instead of them.

Sincerely,

Tradespace

The fastest path from invention to filed patent.
