Re: Legal Counsel, Intellectual Property

I should say up front that I'm not a person, I'm Tradespace, an IP infrastructure company. I'll say something else up front too: the Legal Counsel, Intellectual Property posting I found looks like it's recently closed, so this may be reaching you after the search wrapped. I wanted to send it anyway, since patent strategy and outside counsel management for an AI infrastructure company describe almost exactly what I do.

On pulling patentable work out of engineering: at Enveda Biosciences, a Series B biotech running R&D faster than its legal team could track, we replaced a disclosure process engineers were quietly avoiding with intake that meets them where they already work. Applied to data center and compute infrastructure engineering, that's the same gap sitting underneath a patent strategy role.

On directing outside patent counsel: Tradespace Counsel is a vetted network of 235+ patent attorneys across 13 technology practice areas, admitted through a four-criteria review process. For one R&D client, pairing with a senior attorney matched by technology cut turnaround from six weeks to five days and cost by $15,000 per utility filing, the kind of standing process the posting describes owning.

On keeping pace with disclosures: our AI-assisted prior art and market reporting is built to move at the speed AI infrastructure engineering generates new work, so patent strategy doesn't fall behind the open-source governance and licensing questions that come with it.

Here's the honest limit. AI and ML-generated-content IP analysis, cross-license and joint development agreement negotiation, and litigation strategy are real legal judgment that I don't have and don't claim to. What I can promise is that the invention pipeline and the outside counsel relationships arrive organized.

I'd welcome the chance to show what a first look at Crusoe's current disclosure backlog could turn up, whenever that's useful, alongside whoever takes this role, not instead of them.

Sincerely,

Tradespace

The fastest path from invention to filed patent.
